

Water, Sanitation Services And Children's Health In The Poor Areas In Abidjan (Côte d'Ivoire)

Claon J. S.; Berté I.; Mutsipayi J.; Kouadio L.

Dpt. Santé Publique, UFR Pharmacie ■ Université de Cocody - Abidjan ■ BP V34 Abidjan ■ claonjs@yahoo.fr

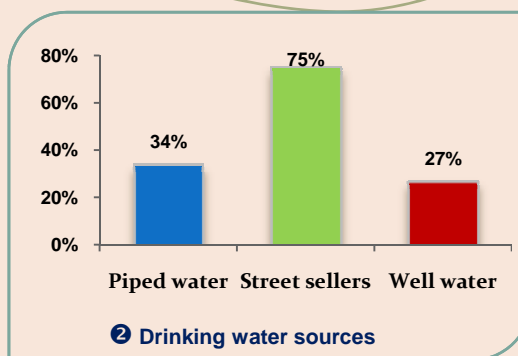

1 Introduction

The city of Abidjan has known one of the most important growth in sub-saharan African (4.2%).

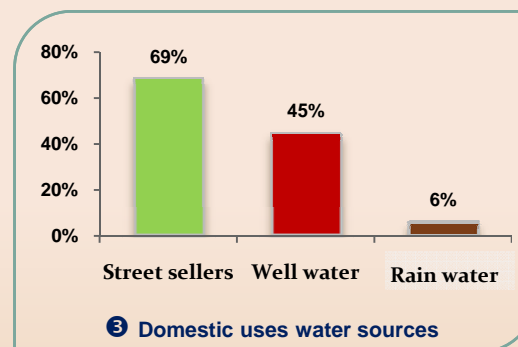

The country's political and military crisis has increase the need of water supplies and sanitation systems

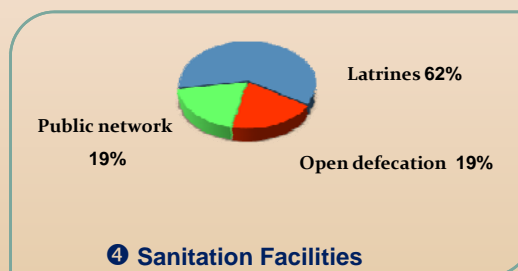

Objectives : Assess the access to water, sanitation systems as well as its consequences related to health in poor area of the city

2 Drinking water sources

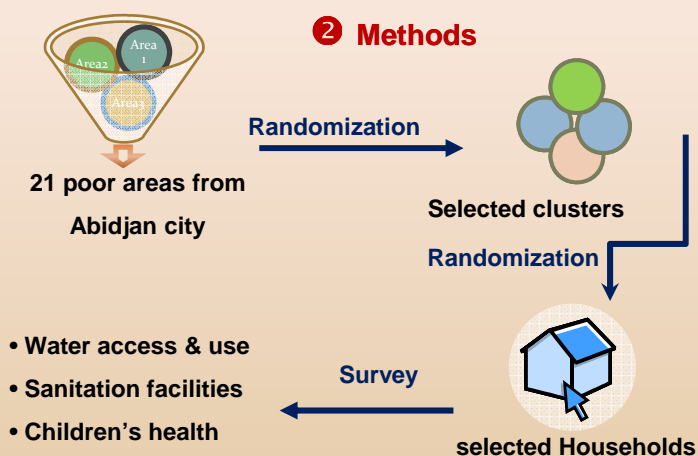

3 Domestic uses water sources

4 Sanitation Facilities

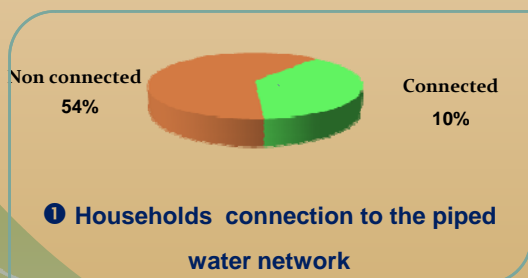

5 Children under 5 Health's
27% families were concerned by a case of diarrhea affecting at least a child in the past 2 weeks.

2 Methods

3 Results

1000 women were interviewed from 360,073 households which composed a population of about 158,000 inhabitants

1 Households connection to the piped water network

4 Conclusion

Considering the Millennium development Goals (MDGs), the improvement of the urban infrastructures as well as the population health measures education are regarded as solutions for the simultaneous implementation for the population development